

Ambassadors Expectations

As an Ambassador for Erasmus you are beginning a journey to creating a portfolio of work that will show employers a range of different skills. Although the position is neither paid nor an internship, it is important to remember that in this ever more competitive world, being part of a programme like this is an opportunity to showcase yourself and your ability to contribute to a special company like our own.

We know that as a freelance contributor to our programme you will not expect to work a full schedule and we do not expect that. We are looking for someone who can complete the following:

- ☐ One task weekly totaling between two and three hours' work

- ☐ Someone who is outgoing and attentive to address student needs in one allocated city in Europe

- ☐ Someone who can write at a good English level and engage with an audience

- ☐ Someone who is committed to the goals of Erasmus and the advancement of Student mobility abroad

If you think you are this person and you are keen to start the process, please contact me at my email thomas@eurasmus.com
